

LIFE SPRING RECOVERY

GEORGETOWN, DELAWARE

In 2019, Ohio-based, Life Spring Recovery, broke into a new market in Georgetown, Delaware. Owner and chief medical officer Robert Masone reached out to the Gillis Gilkerson development team looking for space to launch a new addiction recovery center. They identified a 2,700 square foot office at 501 West Market Street in Georgetown and immediately got to work on custom interior renovations to meet the needs of the client's business model.

The space is equipped with a conference room, group meeting room and four soundproof exam rooms. Drop ceilings and collector provisions were also built into the bathroom design.

"Working with Gillis Gilkerson was a pleasant surprise," said Robert Masone, MD, chief medical officer for Life Spring Recovery. "They are organized and deliver quality work. Robin was all over the project and there whenever we needed her."

Gillis Gilkerson project manager, Robin Steininger and superintendent Ivan Jackson completed the project in 60 days.

"Gillis Gilkerson was very easy to work with and very accessible."
